

Good news in WHS accreditation report

by Arlene Surprenant

Administrators and staff at Wilmington High are "working to provide a school to meet the needs of their students," according to an accreditation report just released from the visiting team for the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

The 13 member team, chaired by Robert Antonucci, school superintendent from Falmouth, paid a visit to the high school in October. Members met with staff, students, parents, and the school committee before compiling their list of commendations and recommendations on ways to improve the school and its program. The extensive 42 page report covers such areas as the curriculum, student services, community support, the facility itself, and school climate. The report is now available at the Wilmington Memorial Library.

The team was pleased, overall, with curriculum offerings, improvements made during the school's renovation, and the "commendable" support provided by parents and local citizens.

"Wilmington High School is a valuable resource of the community and deserves continued attention," states the report. Improvement, however, is needed in several areas.

The team noted there is a need for better communication, especially between the administration and faculty. In the opening section, members said, "the continued success of the school is dependent on better efforts by the teachers, the principal, administrators, parents, and the school committee to work cooperatively." Later, members pointed out while the principal "exercises leadership in all aspects of the school program regarding policy and curriculum," some teachers "feel excluded from the decision-making process and feel they need greater consideration of their views."

The report recognizes that Wilmington High has "a competent and dedicated staff" which fosters a positive school environment. Singled out for special notice were the guidance counselors for their "enthusiasm and dedication;" the school nurse for her "sensitivity and dedication;" the librarian for her competence and "caring," and the cafeteria director for being a "concerned and innovative person."

The visiting team commented on the high student morale which they said was reflected in students' "respect for the school and its personnel." While improvements were recommended in all subject areas except business education and science, the team praised many aspects of the program and the building. Members commended the staff of the school paper for publishing current issues and for "effectively exercising their freedom of expression and creativity." They made positive comments about the business/school partnership, the "award-winning" music department, "the dynamic, diversified, and innovative" English department, science lab courses, and "the outstanding quality and condition of the total facility," among other things.

Many recommendations, such as the perceived need for a late bus, more electives, and renovations to the auditorium, are contingent on the availability of funds. Towards the end of the report, the team recognized that "the budget cuts which have affected the region have had a profound impact" on the school.

Principal Paul Fleming said Monday he was "pretty satisfied" with the report.

"I think they hit the nail on the head. We're a strong school striving for quality. We can implement the majority of the recommendations over the years; if we lose teachers, we can't," said Fleming, referring to the uncertain financial times.

Fleming said the report held no surprises for him and, in fact, zeroed in the same good qualities he's been praising for years. These include strong community support, good student morale, and the dedication of the school faculty.

The principal said he is already taking steps to improve communication with his staff. He said he has set up a schedule of large group faculty meetings and study committees to review such things as graduation requirements. He has also asked department heads to hold regular monthly meetings with their teachers to discuss curriculum issues. Fleming emphasized that only by sharing in the decision making process could there be "progress and excellence."

When asked how the teachers reacted to the report, Fleming would only say some teachers wished there had been more specific suggestions made about their "subject area." He felt, however, that wasn't really the function of the team.

Fleming pointed out that he has little or no control over some of the recommendations, especially those that depend on the budget. These include offering more electives or opening up another level in a subject area. Fleming promised he will continue to strive to give every student, regardless of ability, an equivalent education in basic subjects.

The next step in the accreditation process is for Fleming to meet with the school's steering committee to evaluate the recommendations and try to decide how long it will take to implement them. The Commission on Secondary Schools will review the report in the spring and decide then whether Wilmington High will receive accreditation.

White Christmas

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas, only a couple of weeks late. Wednesday's snowfall gave some seasonal decoration to Wilmington's pile of recycled Christmas trees. To date, the town has collected seven tons of trees, almost quadruple last year's haul. DPW crews will collect trees through the end of the week. Homeowners may also drop off trees at the recycling center off Old Main Street, near the Woburn line.

Gas station given go-ahead for septic system replacement

by Arlene Surprenant

Owners of Gibbs Gas Station on Main Street received the green light Monday to proceed with the replacement of a septic tank. The Wilmington Board of Health told Rick Rowsell, field supervisor for British Petroleum, station owners, and construction engineer Kathy Novak their plans meet the board's specifications.

Health Director Greg Erickson said he did a per test and "everything works out" on the site. In addition, the replacement pipe, which turned out to be the wrong size, is now the correct size for installation and the 1,000 gallon septic tank was replaced with a 1,500 gallon tank.

In December, health officials okayed a cease and desist order on all septic work because it was being done without a permit, a plan, and a licensed installer in charge. At Monday's meeting, Chairman Jim Ficociello asked why an order to stop work was ignored twice by their contractor. Rowsell said there had been some "miscommunication." Novak explained the written order was sent to the wrong person and ended up in BP's Atlanta office.

"The people who needed to know weren't notified," she said.

Station owners have been fined $100 for the violations. Novak added that the station will be sold to new owners.

A public hearing was held Tuesday night on a Public Involvement Plan for the gas station. The plan will help officials gather more information on contamination found on site and outline the best way to proceed with a cleanup operation.

Health, school officials to meet on smoking policy

Wilmington health officials plan to meet with the local school committee at their next meeting to discuss the school's no smoking policy.

At a prior meeting, the board of health expressed concern because faculty members were allowed to smoke in the teachers' room but students were forbidden to smoke anywhere in the high school building. They said they preferred to work toward a smoke-free building.

Chairman Jim Ficociello told his board Monday he met with the school superintendent to discuss the best approach to the smoking problem. Ficociello said the enforcement of the smoking policy should be handled by administrators with participation by the board of health. In the meantime, he added, the board should help educate students to the dangers of smoking. Ficociello pointed out though 3,000 deaths last year were attributed to the use of cocaine, 300,000 were traced to smoking cigarettes.

Corey has right to file, but further issues arise

by Arlene Surprenant

The owner of a piece of property off Ainsworth Road may have won one round against the Wilmington Conservation Commission, but in the end, Robert Corey's information request of the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) may have opened the door to further problems.

Corey and his consulting engineer, Paul Lindholm, had questioned a decision of the commission not to allow a filing with their board until the applicant could show proof of ownership of the property. Corey plans to develop his parcel as a commercial subdivision. Lindholm asked DEP to get involved and look at the site.

In a letter dated January 4, wetlands section chief William Krol upheld Corey's right to file with the commission. He told Lindholm commissioners had no right to deny the filing, largely because they have not shown a relation between ownership of the parcel and statutes of the Wetlands Protection Act.

The rest of the letter, however, opens up other issues for consideration by the board. For instance, Krol said DEP feels "a significant amount of information, which is necessary to a fair and accurate decision," is missing. The applicant is asked to furnish the information as well as reasons and written justification for some of the wetlands flag locations before a decision can be reached. In addition, Krol noted that hydrology calculations raised a number of concerns dealing with retention basins, culverts, drainage, and watersheds.

It was noted that DEP has concerns because more than 40 linear feet of bank and over 5,000 square feet of bordering vegetated wetland may be altered. If the latter figure exceeds the threshold set by the State Environmental Protection Agency, said Krol, DEP cannot permit the project to go through "until MEPA is complied with."

Funds withdrawn for group home

by Arlene Surprenant

Funding has been discontinued for a proposed home for autistic children in Wilmington.

According to Ella Belmore, executive director of the local housing authority, the May Institute plans to look at other locations, mainly because the authority has not been able to come up with a suitable site approved by EOC.

Representatives from the institute came before the WHA board about five years ago to seek their cooperation in building the home. The board expressed an interest because there were several autistic youngsters in town who could benefit from the group home. The Executive Office of Communities and Development okayed a $160,000 grant for the home. That was later increased to $537,000, according to Belmore.

Belmore explained EOC refused to consider a site donated by the town on Houghton Road, even though a respected engineer said it was buildable. Further attempts to come up with land have been unsuccessful, she said.

Board members said though a lot of effort went into finding a site and moving the project along, they didn't feel they could try to restore the funds without approval from the institute.

"Give it one more shot, but you can only do so much," said Dave Fitzgerald.

The board suggested Belmore contact the May Institute to see if they're still interested in locating in Wilmington before discussing the issue with EOC.

Driver signaled every turn in 45-minute police chase

A driver in a black Mustang led police on a 45-minute chase from Wilmington to Lowell on Monday morning. And in spite of a long list of violations, Deputy Chief Bernard Nally said that driver never failed to use his directional signals.

The chase was initiated near the center on Route 38 at 10:45 a.m., when Officer Jon Shepard tried to stop a car for a routine traffic stop, for an expired inspection sticker.

The driver took off, and at times drove at high speeds, but according to Nally, he would then back off. It was almost as if he were allowing police to catch up.

The chase went through Billerica and onto Route 495 South with state police now in pursuit and in a helicopter overhead. Wilmington police then backed off on the chase. But when Sgt. Jim Rooney pulled into a turn-around in the median, what did he see in the northbound lane but the same car.

From there, the chase went down the Lowell Connector into Lowell. Since Wilmington and Lowell do not share a radio frequency, a Wilmington officer stopped to tell a Lowell officer what was afoot. While they were talking, they could hear commotion on the radio. It seems that the driver had come up to a set of lights. Unable to get through, he rammed the car that was blocking him and hit a pedestrian in a crosswalk. And then he fled.

Shortly thereafter, Larry Wheeler, Jr., age 20, of Billerica went to Lowell Police headquarters and turned himself in.

Wilmington police issued a long list of traffic violations, including driving to endanger, speeding, failure to stop for stop signs, operating without a license, pedestrian light violations, failure to stop for a police officer, driving with an expired inspection sticker, failure to keep right and failure to keep in marked lanes.

Lowell police charged him with leaving the scene of an accident. Billerica police were also said to be issuing charges.

Wilmington cable programs on tap

The general manager of Wilmington Community Television earns a special, but hidden benefit in her position. Because of all the Wilmington holiday festivities which were videotaped and aired on Channels 30 and 52, General Manager Karen Kirk was in the holiday spirit for the entire month of December 1990. It is hoped that the WCTV holiday programming put viewers in the holiday spirit as well.

Linda and Jim Corbett videotaped the tree lighting ceremony on the common. Willa Brigham read Christmas stories to dozens of Wilmington children. Most of the Wilmington School holiday concerts were taped and aired on the local channels. Next year it is hoped that trained members of each Wilmington school videotape as many holiday activities in their school as possible. Each school had special events this holiday season which we wish we could have aired. Next year, WCTV hopes that the schools do videotape these special events to be aired on Channels 30 and 52.

WCTV is most proud of the Lions Club involvement at the studio. They invited Santa Claus to WCTV for his second annual visit. Over 250 children went to WCTV to sit on Santa's lap, receive a candy cane and photograph, and were videotaped live on Channel 30. The Lions Club is very excited about getting more involved at WCTV in the future.

We hope all of you enjoyed the special "Nu Beat Crew Night at WCTV" produced by Karen M. Kirk. Four members of the Nu Beat Crew entertained questions by Wilmington viewers. They even performed an original song, live on WCTV. If you wish to highlight someone or a group in town, interview them on WCTV!

Winter is membership time at WCTV! If you are a member of WCTV or wish to become a member at WCTV, please go to a membership meeting Thursday, January 17 at WCTV conference room. All present members are strongly encouraged to attend this meeting.

House condemned for
'unfit basement'

by Arlene Surprenant

An order of condemnation was issued against a house on Hillside Way Monday when health officials determined the basement of the home was "unfit for human habitation." The order was issued as the result of an inspection made by Health Director Greg Erickson.

The home is owned a woman who rents her basement to a couple. The owner, who occupies the main floor of the house, had reportedly asked Erickson to do something about a strong urine odor and other unsanitary conditions resulting from animals kept by the tenants.

Erickson recommended that the board of health condemn the home for three reasons: insufficient ventilation in the cellar, the lack of windows in the basement, and a large hole in the floor where water services come into the house. He added the order is not really tied to the original complaint of unsanitary conditions.

The owner and her tenants were present at the hearing. The owner said, since the first complaint in November, she and the tenants have tried to reach agreement on how to clean up the living quarters. She said that the tenants plan to move out in approximately four weeks but they are presently strapped financially. She added she would fix the violations. Board members said it would be difficult to create window space below ground. The homeowner urged the board to give her time to work something out. The board was reluctant to give an extension of time.

"I'm really obliged to recommend condemnation. Our responsibility as public officials is we have to enforce the code," said Erickson. He added, once local officials are made aware of violations, they must take action or the town becomes liable.

Under the health code, the living quarters downstairs must be vacated within two weeks and cannot be reoccupied until the board says the basement is habitable. The board also has the right to issue a $50 a day fine if the order is violated.

Board questions renovation work

by Arlene Surprenant

Questions were raised this week about renovations being made to Michael's Place on Lowell Street.

Health Director Greg Erickson told the board of health Monday there were "some kind of renovations" going on inside the restaurant in order to prepare for the sale of frozen yogurt. He explained, because there was a below standard septic system on the property, owner Michael McCoy was not supposed to change his operation in any way. In the mid-80's, however, McCoy was allowed to increase his seating capacity to 100 seats provided he met certain conditions.

Chairman Jim Ficociello said if there were renovations underway, McCoy should be invited to appear before the board to show members a copy of his plan.

"He should not be doing it without our consent," he said.

Erickson noted that the owner would need another license to sell frozen dessert.

Members said they were uncertain what restrictions were placed on McCoy when he increased his seating capacity. They agreed the owner should appear before them before anymore money is spent to change or enlarge the restaurant.

TAX CHANGES: HIDDEN RATE INCREASE

At the same time that Congress lowered the top effective tax rate to 31 percent, they tacked on new limits on deductions and exemptions that will effectively raise the bite on upper-income taxpayers.

New for 1991 is a "floor" on itemized deductions - three percent of adjusted gross income over $100,000. That figure is subtracted from the total to determine the allowable deductions that can be taken from adjustable gross income to determine taxable income. This effectively raises the tax rate to 31.93 percent for these payers.

In addition, personal exemptions are phased out gradually for joint filers with taxable income over $150,000.

How will this affect you? A look at last year's tax return will offer the clues you need. If your adjusted gross income was below $50,000 ($80,000 for couples), there's probably little effect. If it's more, see how your deductions will change.

Hachey resigns from housing authority

Elaine Hachey, the state appointed member of the Wilmington Housing Authority, has submitted her resignation to the board, effective January 1, 1991. In her letter, Hachey said she was stepping down from the board for personal and business reasons.

Hachey's five year term is reportedly up in 1993. According to WHA Chairman Michael Donovan, the process now is for the town's legislative delegation, local selectmen, and the town manager to recommend a replacement to the state.

Woburn Street School

The Woburn Street School gymnasium has taken on a new fantastic look. Graphic artist Tom DeLetter has completed the design and painting of various sports figures on the walls. Along with its new looks, the gym awaits the arrival of physical education student teacher Christine Deroeve to begin student teaching January 23. Christine is a senior at Springfield College majoring in physical education.

Project Enterprise is underway at the Woburn Street School. This is an after school program for gifted and talented students. Twenty-five fourth and fifth graders are currently participating under the instruction of Mr. Brian Smith, a fifth grade teacher at the Wildwood School. Feedback from the program has been great and the students are very enthusiastic.

Ms. Fields' kindergartners are busy learning all about winter and are anxiously awaiting the first snowfall. Along with learning all about numbers, these students are using big books and foot books to enjoy reading. Miss Feeney's students are incorporating the computer lab into a weekly publishing forum. Students will work in teams writing creative stories. Each team will print its work and then a group editing session will be held to reinforce grammar, punctuation, and sentence structure.

Lani Schreiber from "Adventures in Science" visited with grades one through three this week. Ms. Schreiber presented three natural science programs taught with hands on, activity oriented approach designed to help students better understand the world around them. This program included "What is an Insect?," "Creatures of the Night," and "Friendly Spiders." Using their always vivid imaginations, students concluded the class by creating model insects of their own and had a chance to meet "Racki" an eight foot plastic jointed spider. Many thanks to the Pac for sponsoring this wonderful enrichment program.

Shawsheen School

Children in grade four will be having physicals beginning January 9. It is a state requirement that children in grades four, eight and 11 have physicals. These physicals generally check eyes, ears, nose, throat, heart and lungs. The children are not required to undress and can be exempt from the physicals if the parents have a physical completed by their own physician.

The projected date for the morning and afternoon kindergarten change over is Monday, January 28. Specific details later.

The Pac will meet at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 15; Vision and hearing screening will be held January 22-25; Chapter 1 general meeting will be held from 6:30 to 9 p.m. January 25; Noon dismissal for teacher in service is scheduled for January 30 and a Pac journey into jazz is scheduled for Feb. 5.

North Intermediate

Experimental blends of science and technology meet grade eight students at Wilmington's North Intermediate School. Mr. Crisp's technology class was intertwined with Mr. Chasse's science class to explore simple machines.

During the week of December 10, students began simple machine lessons using science apparatus as an introduction. Mr. Crisp finished the class lesson using Lego technology. In science class the students learn how the information and knowledge get applied to machines. In technology they learn how to build models of the science concepts. For example, does the length of the handle of a nut cracker make a difference in cracking a nut? Would a long handle wheelbarrow work more effectively? Grade eight students search for answers. The week ended with the science class lesson on wheel and axle mechanical advantage. The Lego approach had the students build a contraption that could race down hill faster! A computer equipped with sensors measured time elapsed and distance traveled by the contraption. Wow! What a race! They are all winners of learning!

C.A.S.P.A.R.

Caspar is a Cambridge and Somerville program for alcohol rehabilitation, which is a nationally recognized program. They would like to wish the students and their families a very happy and healthy new year. Caspar especially thanks the grade eight students who volunteered to participate in an eight week small group program to enhance their knowledge and understanding of drugs and alcohol. A Christmas party culminated their activities.

Ms. Karen Butens was the Caspar group leader. Ms. Kolodner school counselor, coordinated the activity. Another small group will begin this month. It will also be on a voluntary basis and is an offshoot of the grade seven class program that was run last spring.

Students of the month

The students of the month for November are: grade six, Michael Carroll and Kristen Peach; grade seven, Rene Morin and David Lee; grade eight, Matthew Southmayd and Sherrie Ciotti. Specialists Jason Arsenault and Beth Murch. Congratulations to all of the above students.

Parent meeting

There is a meeting for all parents whose students attend the North and West Intermediate Schools on Tuesday, January 15 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the North Intermediate School. The subject matter will contain curriculum information on the human sexuality program for the sixth, seventh and eighth graders. Mr. Richard DeRosa, director and Ms. Karen Cozzoli, teacher of health will answer questions.

SEEING IN A NEW LIGHT

A person who observes a noticeable difference in someone else may remark that she sees that person "in a new light." The fact is that this phrase may apply to any woman who looks at herself in the mirror when applying makeup. Those who put on makeup with the benefit of a cool fluorescent light may believe that they need more makeup than necessary. These women tend to look heavily made up under incandescent or natural light. If so, cool fluorescent bulbs should be replaced in the makeup area with warm white fluorescents which tend toward the red end of the color spectrum. Even better are bathroom fixtures that surround makeup mirrors with natural-looking incandescent light.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:
Unknown to many, the Wilmington Planning Board will be faced with the decision whether or not to approve a proposal to build an industrial development on Ainsworth Road.

Why would the town even consider the building of yet another industrial park when we currently have an abundance of industrial real estate already vacant and available for sale?

Why would the town consider the destruction of more conservation resources in this area (with so little remaining) by the construction of this industrial park?

Why would the town grant Mr. Corey permission to further pollute our land, streams, and environment by the construction of this industrial park?

And why, and most importantly, would the town allow the safety of our children to be jeopardized with the addition of yet more trucks and more traffic on Andover Street, an already overly abused and heavily traveled road, by the construction of this industrial park?

As concerned and deeply disturbed community residents of the Ainsworth Road area, we urge the town members to make a well thought out decision to help preserve the land, water, air and well being of the homes and residents surrounded by this development.

Our future dilemma is in your hands!

Sincerely,
Deborah & Paul Sordillo,
Lori and John MacDonald

Dear Larz:
On Wednesday, January 16 at 7 p.m., the WHS Pac will present its second in a series of programs concerning teenagers and alcohol. The program will feature experts in various fields who deal with the problems and safety issues related to underage drinking. Michael Cairra will act as moderator to the panel of experts which includes:

Dr. Kevin Callahan, psychologist and counselor; Mrs. Tansy Chapman, vicar of St. Elizabeth's Episcopal Chapel; Paul Fleming, principal of WHS; Chief Bobby

Stewart of the Wilmington Police Department and Dr. LaPlante, MD and councilor at Highpoint.

The program will be live from the studios of WCTV, Channel 30, Wilmington. The viewers at home are invited to call in and participate in the discussion. All callers will remain anonymous. We encourage you and your teenager to plan on watching and calling in to this important program.

Underage drinking has become one of the major health and safety issues for teens across the country. As concerned parents, it is important to learn all we can about the issue of alcohol and about prevailing local attitudes toward alcohol. We hope this program will be the catalyst for further conversation and discussion between you and your teenagers.

Sincerely,
WHS PAC

Dear Larz:
The following is a letter that I have sent to town officials and neighbors. If you think that it may be worthy of space, I think that it may help to make them pay more serious attention to the situation if they know the problem is before the public.

I'll respect your judgment.

Wilmington Planning Board and members:
Regarding the proposed Ainsworth Road Industrial Development.

I have lived at 52 Andover Street for the past 40 years. I do not oppose growth, progress or intelligent development of the town's assets and resources and I do not consider myself a provincial "townie" fossil living in the past, in fact I disdain such persons. I am not a communicant of town hall, selectmen's meetings or board meetings. In fact I am relatively unknown to most such persons except for my occasional "tongue in cheek" cumudgeon letters in the Town Crier.

This has been a good town to live in, and a better than average neighborhood with a good mix of families, both ethnic and economic, however, I see the ecology, the pollution, the watershed, the underground water level, the traffic, the children's safety all slowly deteriorating and I regard the proposed Ainsworth Road Industrial Development as the final blow in destroying this area. The so called "bottom line" is money, tax base, and greed. The interest of the residential citizen (which is what a town is supposed to be about), seems to be the very last consideration.

The industrial development in the Andover Street and Route 125 area have already raised the ground water level. Persons, including myself who never had water in their cellars now have problems, those who already had some problem now have very serious problems and this includes their septic systems. The traffic on Andover Street from Route 125 through Woburn Street is overwhelming both morning and evening. The large trucks up to 18 wheelers are running in and out of Ainsworth Road as early as 6 a.m. both rattling and banging as they disturb the whole neighborhood. In dry weather they raise repeated dust clouds that settle on the foliage and adjoining houses. The roadsides, the McDonald Construction area, and the proposed development site is an ecological mess. I do remember when it was a natural area.

Two new young families recently bought new houses at 100 and 104 Andover Street. I'm sure they did, not realize what the environment was. This proposed Industrial Development will not only further disillusion them of their hopes as a family in locating in Wilmington, but will further destroy any equity they may have in their home and make it near to impossible to sell out of a bad situation. There are other families on this side of Ainsworth Road who face the same problems.

As for me, I just want to live here in peace, pay a fair level of taxes, not be a thorn to the neighbors or the town, and expect the same in return. I don't waste my time going to meetings and hearings that are mostly rhetoric with little results.

Please give some serious consideration to those families who are my neighbors. Address those concerns of environment, neighborhood flooding, watershed conservation, traffic and child safety. And as for waivers of existing regulations, past waivers of regulations is just the very reason that this residential and watershed area has already deteriorated. The environment and the families should be considered over and above the "bottom line."

Sincerely,
George L. Webster

Reduced and abandoned: The crime at Tewksbury Hospital

by Paul H. Sullivan

Now that the Weld administration has taken office let's hope that the years of neglect at Tewksbury Hospital have come to an end.

During the Dukakis administration one of the most disgraceful things he and his minions did was to turn the once crown jewel of the state hospital system into a rhinestone. This was accomplished by his political interference and blatant disregard, if not disrespect for the proud tradition of the Tewksbury Hospital.

At one time, those who worked at the hospital felt a real sense of pride. This was derived not only from the important work they were doing, because there is no work more important than caring for those in the twilight of their life, but also from the hospital facility itself.

As the Tewksbury State Hospital, it at one time included a thriving farm with livestock and acres of crops. But under the Dukakis administration the hospital changed. Not only was the farm closed and the long time superintendent forced out, but the staff was demoralized by underfunding.

This has led to a critical shortage of nurses so dire that the present facility is at less than half capacity, while the need for care has increased, due to the aging of our population.

If anyone doubts the condition of the hospital or the lack of commitment to it from the Dukakis administration they need only drive down Livingston Street, and look at the disrepair of the homes that once housed employees of the hospital. It is an absolute crime that those houses have been left to decay in such a manner.

This is in no way a reflection on the employees at the hospital, or the current administration. On the contrary, the people who are employed at this facility are as much the victims of the neglect of the hospital as anyone. From the nursing staff to the maintenance department, they have suffered from the abandonment of the administration.

Hopefully under the Weld administration this hospital can once again thrive and become the cornerstone of the community that it once was. If Bill Weld makes a commitment to the hospital he will have a lot of support from many people, including the Friends of the Tewksbury Hospital, the Tewksbury Board of Selectman, the Board of Trustees at the hospital, the state rep and state senator and the community at large.

With this type of advocacy Governor Weld is in a great position to put his entrepreneurial government into practice.

We're with you, Gov.! You lead — We will follow!

The January 13, 1966 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington reported that there would be between 40 and 50 articles to be acted upon at the March town meeting, including:

A new dog leash law proposed by David Wiberg of Birchwood Road; construction of a new library proposed by the board of trustees; firefighters would ask the town to accept a statute that would limit their work week to 42 hours; Henry Chinn submitted an article seeking to name the new West Intermediate School after George Spanos.

The MBTA, considering the location of a terminus in Wilmington was seeking an area where 6,000 cars could be parked.

Billie Wilson of Andover Street, named in Who's Who among American Women. Mrs. Wilson, of Andover Street was among one of 22,000 women honored in the fourth edition of the volume.

The gaily lighted Forrest home on Baland Road, was pictured as visible from Route 93 and "one of the better town's Christmas displays."

Five Wilmington men were scheduled to take part in the Golden Gloves boxing matches in Lowell — Terry Quinlan of Taplin Avenue; Dave DeLucia of Beech Street; Dave Welch of Brand Avenue; Bill Hadley of Main Street and Jack Muir of Shawsheen Avenue.

The Women's Club International Affairs Committee, led by Mrs. William Dayton was planning to observe International Affairs Day January 20 at Fellowship Hall in the United Methodist Church.

Fred Laffin of Veranda Avenue completed 11 weeks of basic training at the Coast Guard Training Center, Cape May, N.J.

Elia's Country Store was offering a box of book matches for 10 cents; a two pound can of Nestle's Quik for 59 cents; and N.Y. sirloin steak for 88 cents a pound.

A small ad explained why 1966 automobile insurance would cost more.

Tri Town Mobil at Lowell and West streets was advertising a clearance of snow tires — $7.99 cash any 13" tire — "All snows must go..."

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Ann Looney's entry into the political fray as a candidate for the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen will trigger the same challenges for her as have been observed previously when political activists leave the rallies and the letter to the editor pages to become part of the very system they've frequently attacked.

Two seats are up for grabs this year, and incumbent Bill Hurton announced to his inner circle this week that he will not seek another term.

Looney has served as spokeswoman for the anti-development group in Tewksbury which has brought upheaval to the local political establishment. About two years ago Tewksbury was embroiled in controversy as FBI agents knocked on a few doors while rumors fed the fire that there was perhaps even more of an investigation going on in the community.

The issue at hand has been alleged corruption on the part of officials and the development of commercial and residential property in the town.

Looney has always been eloquent. She's an attorney by trade, a state employee, and has never been accused of being timid. A few selectmen have been known to wince once or twice when they see her coming to the microphone, knowing full well that her words can stimulate an angry local electorate.

The angry electorate had had enough by the time Charles Coldwell was up for reelection last spring and opted instead for Tom Camara in an upset that will be long remembered. That was the first, and most recent, indication that the anti-development group led by Looney had real credibility at the polls. Thereafter, people in Tewksbury continued to support Looney's principal cause which was ousting members of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Today, Looney begins her campaign to change government from within, and she might find its a lot more difficult than heckling from the sidelines.

The Zoning Board of Appeals issue, long the catalyst for anger so successfully harnessed by Looney, is fast becoming a dead one. The ZBA members are ousted, the board structure has been radically changed by an overwhelming vote of town meeting, and the controversy has become the past, not the present. So the question arises how successful a political candidate will Looney be without anything to cry foul about?

Looney's candidacy does have its detractors, particularly members of the development community. Though wealthy developers are always fun to pick on its the multitude of middle-class people who work for them that could hurt a candidate like Looney. Carpenters, plumbers, electricians, shinglers, masons, landscapers and all their families have been hit right in the purse when some developments, rightfully or wrongfully so, were stopped.

They won't vote for Looney.

They'll vote against her.

Looney is joined by Tom Conlon and David LeBlanc, both of whom have officially entered the selectmen race. LeBlanc, an accountant, resides at Pond Street, while Conlon is a local school teacher.

Looney will be well organized as Jim Richards, Paul Daley, and her mother Claire Looney organize the campaign. Looney can also be expected to outperform most opponents at any debate format. Public speaking is definitely her cup of tea.

However, the ZBA political punching bag is gone. The demise of the board members was a bandwagon which many people rode successfully. But now the wagon has stopped and Activist Looney, now Candidate for Selectman Looney, will have to do more than just criticize and attack.

She'll actually have to offer proposals.

Looney's candidacy might be especially interesting for the fact that it actually keeps an incumbent in the race for reelection. With Bill Hurton heading for political retirement, Lou Carciofi will probably opt to run despite what's been a less than favorable year for his career.

To Carciofi, Looney's challenge may be a pride issue. She and her group have hammered away at Carciofi consistently. But both Carciofi and Looney are very similar; they're both fighters. Carciofi, who continues to fight charges against him that he acted improperly, will have to stay in this race and fight a challenge from his greatest political opponent, Ann Looney.

It all makes for an especially colorful political year in Tewksbury.

Briefly in politics . . .

Elaine Hachey has resigned as the governor's appointee to the Wilmington Housing Authority. Hachey was a Dukakis appointee and her replacement will be selected by Governor Bill Weld. The new gubernatorial member may have to choose sides in the ongoing battle between Housing Authority Chairman Mike Donovan and executive director Ella Belmore. One source in the Republican party said Wilmington Republican Town Committee Chairman Tom Siracusa has expressed interest in the appointment. Siracusa is an engineer and a long-time Weld supporter.

Tewksbury Selectman Charles Coppola lost his chance for the Northeast Housing Court Magistrate's post at 10:30 last Wednesday morning. One of Coppola's key supporters on the governor's council "took a walk" as they say in the business, clearing the way for Paul Burke who also resides in Tewksbury. Burke was sworn in by Dukakis just one hour before the governor left office, making Burke the last official appointment of the Dukakis administration. Coppola reportedly called Burke later in the day and offered his congratulations.

Of the sixty or so last minute appointments made by departing governor Mike Dukakis other local benefactors were former state representatives Augie Grace and Geoff Beckwith. Grace was appointed to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and the board of directors of the Massachusetts Housing Finance Corporation and Beckwith was given the chairmanship of the newly created Toxics Use Reductions Advisory Board, created by legislation Beckwith filed last year. The three posts are non-paying.

Representative Rob Krekorian is running for freshmen class president. That's the House of Representatives freshmen class which traditionally elects a leader from its ranks of brand, new legislators. Also in the running is Representative Carol Donovan of Woburn.

State Senator Bob Buell is in the running for the post of assistant minority leader in the state senate.

Women's Club meeting next week

The January 17 meeting of the Wilmington Women's Club at the United Methodist Church will begin at 10 a.m. with a bake, or bakeless sale. Many talented cooks will offer their goodies for sale while others may choose to make an equal donation of money instead.

Members are urged to take to the meeting any Scott paper products apple logos they may have collected. The program, which will help obtain learning materials for the Woburn Street School, has been extended to February.

At the last regular meeting, the club vote to act on the recommendation of the executive board to sponsor a high school sophomore to attend the Hugh O'Brien "Hobie" program. The sophomore chosen will have demonstrated strong leadership qualities.

Luncheon will be served by Phyllis Flaherty and her committee, and an invocation will be given by Beverly Soper.

After the business meeting a very interesting program will be offered entitled "The Boston Public Garden." Author Barbara W. Moore knows her subject very well, and has the slides to prove it.

Shawsheen Tech open house Jan. 23

An opportunity to explore vocational and technical careers, will be a major part of the 7 to 9:15 p.m. Wed., Jan. 23 open house for eighth graders and their parents at Shawsheen Tech.

"Parents and students looking at career plans must be aware of the economic changes, not only in Mass., but in the world," said John McDermott, asst. superintendent for community services. "By the time today's eighth graders graduate, employers will be asking, 'What technical skills do you have?' Shawsheen has equipped itself with the technology for the 90's and beyond, and more. We can give students not only skills and technical training, but academic preparation as well. When they reach the 12th grade, they then have the option of either going directly to work or pursuing higher education," McDermott said Shawsheen gives its students "job prep and college prep."

Designed for eighth graders, and their parents, the Jan. 23 open house begins with a brief introduction in the cafeteria at 7 p.m., with a welcome by Charles Lyons, superintendent-director. Refreshments, coaches, guidance counselors and graduates will be located in the cafeteria. Students and parents are urged to arrive before seven to pick up schedules for visiting three technical areas and an orientation session. Mailers were sent out so they can select areas of interest to be included in the schedule.

In each of the vocational or technical education programs, students will be on hand to demonstrate and explain the skills learned and products or services offered, as well as potential careers. The fourth session is an orientation to the school philosophy, schedule and academics, as well as a question and answer session with Shawsheen teachers. The program concludes with a free period during which visitors are encouraged to visit the academic computer lab, the cafeteria and other areas of interest. Snow date is Thursday, January 24.

Living proof that, with us, your OB care is a labor of love.

Last spring, the Lannan family had a baby. Yes, the whole family. The lives of fathers, brothers and sisters are forever touched by the new addition.

From the moment the Lannans chose New England Memorial for the birth of their baby, they felt the genuine warmth and involvement of our OB staff. The educational classes for first-time mothers, the informative literature, prepared childbirth classes, prenatal exercise and nutritional programs—all designed to support and enhance a pregnancy. Likewise, our postpartum support groups, sibling classes and refresher courses provided the follow-up care that gave a real sense of confidence, and competence.

The radiance of a new mother's face. An infant's first smile. The pride in a father's eyes—living proof that at New England Memorial, we deliver a labor of love.

Wilmington wins pair

The Wilmington eighth grade girls traveling team came away with two victories this past weekend.

Friday night the Wildcats played Revere and won a tough physical game, 45-21. The game was highlighted in the fourth quarter when Nancy Pote came down and hit a three pointer. Revere, not to be outdone, came right back and matched Wilmington's three, but it wasn't over yet.

The next time down court Laurie Southmayd received a pass and stepped behind the line and hit all net. That sequence was definitely the highlight of the game.

On Saturday the girls travelled to Salem to play a much-improved Salem team. Wilmington won the game, 52-30. High scorers were Jackie Hayden and Laurie Southmayd, both with 11 points.

NFL picks

Bengals the upset pick

by Mike Stuart
 Certainly last weekend provided numerous one-play turning points that eventually decided each contest.

In Philly, Ben Smith's fumble recovery for a touchdown was called back and made a 10 point swing a crucial turning point. In Miami, it was the holding call on K.C., this penalty knocking them out of field goal range.

Meanwhile on Sunday it was Ikey Woods for a one yard plunge on fourth down and in Chicago, the blocked field goal that was reversed on an offside.

Let's hope that this weekend teams provide us with more plays that win games for themselves and not so many turning point plays that cost another team a chance. This weeks picks.

Buffalo 24 Miami 20
 I'll take the Bills because of defense and the crowd, but the points might be too much on a game of this importance.

S.F. 33 Washington 16
 I felt Philly was the only team to have a chance, but if Washington has a proper game plan, well then, watchout.

Cincinnati 28 L.A. Raiders 17
 One road team has to win and I'll take Cincy and the points that they'll be that team.

N.Y. Giants 17 Chicago 14
 At least you know this game will provide many crunching hits, but defense will be the difference.
Last week: 1-3 outright 2-2 vs spread

Boys and girls ages six through 12 are urged to get away from the television set on Saturday mornings from 9 to 11 in order to learn new basketball skills, set personal goals for achievement, develop lifelong fitness habits and to learn what good sportsmanship and teamwork are all about.

The entire family is encouraged to get involved as volunteer coaches, cheerleaders, or as unconditional fans.

At the YMCA everybody plays - boys and girls. There are no cuts and there is no bench sitting. The league is coached by a core of dedicated volunteers who are trained by YMCA professionals. This is a great value-oriented experience for all.

Outdoors column*Chilling the Grim Reaper

by Bill Conlon

Standard medical belief for many years held that the brain dies after four minutes without oxygen. Stop breathing for four minutes and you were finished. But that's now being questioned. Something known as the Cold Water Response is today being discussed in medical circles.

Of course, standard medicine once believed that too much blood was bad for the body, so they'd open a vein and draw off a pint or so. Some believe that such a medical practice did George Washington in. Times change, so does medicine.

Within the last few days, a woman fell through the ice of a pond in the town of Lincoln. Accounts vary but it seems she was under water at least an hour.

She lived. That she survived at all is a miracle, but she later died in a hospital. However, she was revived after more than an hour beneath the water.

Another such incident a few years ago involved a boy in the Midwest who fell through the ice, but with a much happier ending. The boy was pulled from the icy water after 20 minutes, and he was revived. Today he is alive and well.

What saved both lives, albeit for a short while for the local woman, is the "Cold Water Response," which is still being debated in the medical circles. Some say it's a leftover from birth, when we survived for long periods without breathing.

Apparently, the cold water chills the body enough to trigger an odd response. Blood flow ceases, for the most part, but a trickle still flows to the brain and important organs. All bodily functions slow to a crawl, and life is maintained for an extended period.

Just how long you can survive and still be revived, because of the Cold Water Response, is not known. You can't really experiment with it, only take facts as they happen. The kid in the Midwest beat the numbers, but the woman in Lincoln didn't, at least in the long term.

For something that will make your skin crawl, watch the movie "The Abyss," where the Cold Water Response is used as a plot element.

In "The Abyss," a pair of deep-sea researchers are trapped in a crippled mini-sub, with only one breathing apparatus. They're a few hundred yards from safety, and there is no way for both to make it back safely to their living dome with only one breathing set-up.

So, one of the characters decides to utilize the Cold Water Response. As the mini-sub fills up with water, she orders her companion to put on the breathing gear, and she drowns, in his face. Very dramatic, and it made my skin crawl. Drowning scares the hell out of me.

With his "dead" companion in tow, the survivor swims back to the dome while radioing ahead for medical equipment to be waiting.

Well, after heavy dramatics trying to revive her, she survives none the worse for wear.

The bottom line of the Cold Water Response is that one may be able to survive a winter drowning, even if more than four minutes was spent in the icy drink. It's a ride on a nasty rollercoaster, but it may not be fatal.

Of course, now that we know that Cold Water Response exists, it raises the issue that some drowning victims in the past could have been revived. But we can't dwell on that.

A far more intelligent thing to do, though, is to avoid having to rely on a Cold Water Response to save your life. If you don't fall through the ice you won't need to be revived after a drowning.

Stay off the ice. It hasn't been cold enough, long enough, for truly safe ice. Give it a week or two.

— Tackle Box —

On Friday night, January 18, the Shawheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (S.W.E.A.T.) kicks off a busy year with an evening of entertainment at Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club on Chandler Street. For a mere $5 donation, the night includes music, dancing, refreshments and a cash bar. The event runs from 7 to 11 p.m., with tickets available by calling 851-9505, 640-9977 or 851-4094.

Current plans for S.W.E.A.T. in 1991 include intensive river clean-ups on the Shawheen, riverfront land acquisition, tree plantings and an idea that is quite unusual.

To promote environmental awareness, S.W.E.A.T. is starting up five "clans," based on animals found in the Shawheen River area. The club hopes that the clans will offer a rally point of identification for people to pay attention to their surroundings, which might later include activities such as races and recycling efforts, t-shirts, environmental cleanup, and such. Sounds interesting. Maybe I'm getting old, but this sounds like an idea that might really fly in the schools!

From January 10 - 13, look for the Worcester Boat Show, in that city, based out of the Centrum. Adults are $6, kids are $3, under 6 is free. If it floats, it will be there, from oceanic vessels to sailboards.

The weekend of February 2 and 3 will see the huge 12th annual "Great Rotary Fishing Derby" in Meredith N.H. To enter by mail, send $15 to P.O. Box 1210, Meredith, N.H., 03253. Details coming up later.

The 15th Annual Eastern Fishing & Outdoors Expo will return to the Worcester Centrum, February 6 to February 10. Adults will fork over $7 to enter, kids $3, but it's worth it. Plan on spending at least two hours to see everything in this biggie.

Industrial parking lots targeted

The police department is investigating numerous incidents of vandalism, larcenies and stolen cars from the industrial areas of town. Large industrial parking lots are lucrative targets for those bent on stealing cars or auto parts. Employees of local industries should be sure to lock their vehicles and take notice of other cars parked nearby.

Be sure to hide any valuables in the trunk. It takes only a second to break a window and scoop whatever is visible on the front or back seat. Watching out for your fellow employee is the next best thing.

When an employee is on break, or outside for a while, it is advisable to take a look around the parking lot. If anyone looks suspicious, call security or the police. Officers are always interested in checking out suspicious activity wherever it occurs. If there is nothing wrong, no one is hurt, but if a theft is prevented, it is well worth the phone call.

If it is possible check your car during the day or evening, it is important for the police to know as soon as possible after a theft or damage has occurred. Early notification greatly increases the chances of solving the crime and recovering missing property.

Wilmington senior topics

Programs have resumed

All of our programs have resumed after the holidays, except the craft class. That class will resume the beginning of February. Brochures on all of our activity and health programs along with services available for our elderly residents can be picked up in the Senior Center, also in churches and town buildings throughout the town. If you wish one mailed to you, call the Senior Center, we will be happy to send one.

Meals program

The Council has a meals program for the seniors which is two fold. That is meals on wheels which is delivering meals daily when the schools are in session to seniors confined to their home due to illness or disability. The other part is seniors eating together at our congregated lunch site in Wilmington High School. Any Wilmington resident 60 years of age or older may take part in either the meals on wheels or eating together by calling the Center the day before you wish the meal or on Friday for the following week. If it is meals on wheels, please give your name, telephone, medical condition and address. The cost of the meal is 50 cents. At present, we have two meals on wheels drivers delivering approximately 80 meals a day, each driver traveling over 30 miles a day. It must be understood that some meals will be arriving before noon and others after as it takes about two and a half hours to deliver so many meals traveling so many miles. No senior should go to the lunch site unless they have reserved a meal by calling the Center.

Minibus

The Council has a minibus to transport seniors free of charge to medical appointments, the Center and lunch site. Wilmington has a

The bus is available by calling the Center if possible the day before or before 9:30 a.m. Please do not call for transportation if a family member is living with you in the home. It is not fair to have the minibus go to a home to take a senior to a medical appointment or any other elderly travel to find a family member living with the senior in the home at that time.

Respite care

We also have a respite care servicer to assist seniors living alone or with spouse due to disability or advanced age who cannot use the minibus for medical appointments. Who cannot shop for themselves, but need food or medicine. She can help with medicine calendars and relieve care givers when necessary, but once again she has many seniors in the town who live alone with no one to help them. Therefore she is only given four hours a day or 20 hours a week and cannot take care of all the requests for her services. There are times when she will not be able to help you no matter how hard she may try. This has to be understood when you call for services.

February social

The Council on Aging's therapeutic social for the month of February will be a Valentine dinner dance at the Tewksbury/Wilmington Elks on February 14. A roast beef dinner with all the trimming will be served at seven o'clock. Music for dancing will be by Jim Blute. All of our socials are for Wilmington residents over 60 years of age unless it is the spouse of a senior who is not 60. Sign up for this social will begin January 10 at 9 a.m., not before. A $3 non-refundable deposit will be required when signing up.

Adopt-A-Dog

199 dogs find homes in Reading and Wilmington

By DOUGLAS WOOD-BOYLE

Having people spay their pets and keep their dogs on a leash and licensed would keep local animal control officers in Reading and Wilmington happy.

According to the records, kept by Wilmington Animal Control Officer Ellen Davis and Reading's Regina Benoit, about 100 dogs in each town had to be taken into custody last year.

The good news is that only one of those 200 animals was destroyed as both communities have a successful adopt-a-dog program.

As Benoit said in an interview, "We wouldn't need an adoption program if people kept their pets at home or had them spayed and neutered."

The two often work as a pair, and Davis said "We didn't take this job because we want to kill things. We like to get the (lost) animals adopted."

She added "To have this job, you have to love and adore animals."

Davis said that she pushes the licensing of dogs in Wilmington so that when she does find a loose dog, it can be returned to its rightful owner. She noted that many times the owner will have called looking for the dog, before she picks it up in the streets.

"I return those dogs to the owners immediately," Davis said. She noted that if the animal's owner is not known, the dog has to go to the Central Animal Hospital in Stoneham. The facility serves as the pound for the two communities and Medford.

Davis said that once an animal is brought to the pound, Dr. Howard Hutchins automatically administers shots, which cause the first day cost of keeping the animal to be $35. After that, it is $10-per-day.

Dogs are kept in the pound for 10-days, by law, and can then either be given up for adoption or euthanized.

Davis and Benoit both work to have the dogs adopted. As a result of their efforts, the number of animals available for adoption has decreased in the last four years.

We didn't notice many people making New Years resolutions this year. That's probably a good thing, since most of us never stick to our resolutions anyway. We bet most of us can't even remember what last year's resolutions were, never mind kept them. Yet, in keeping with tradition, we once again found ourselves standing amongst friends and readers recently at the Woburn Mall, where we attempted to learn what some of you are planning to resolve in the coming twelve months. The following are some of

About the Towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

WAKEFIELD - According to Wakefield Director of Assessments Robb Dix, the average value of a home in Wakefield remains at $185,000 - despite the sluggish economy and declining real estate values in Massachusetts.

Sales, however, are down. To simplify billing, new Wakefield tax bills show only one figure which encompasses both house and property, leaving the curious property owner to hoot it to the Board of Assessors office for a breakdown. So to speak.

LYNNFIELD - Lynnfield dog officer Charles Cavallaro recently warned residents to avoid any raccoons which may appear in their yards during the day, a sign that the nocturnal animals may be carrying distemper which could easily affect dogs or cats.

Two years ago, Cavallaro picked up 50 raccoons; last year, 37; this year, 49 - with seven months left in the fiscal year.

STONEHAM - The senior captain and the most senior member of the department, Stoneham Fire Captain James McDermott recently retired after 37 years of service.

McDermott is succeeded by 29-year-old Joseph Rolli who joined the department in '83.

WINCHESTER - Winchester native Deborah Kittredge celebrated First Night's 15th anniversary in the new position of general manager, overseeing First Night, Inc.'s administrative and budget departments.

Most recently, Kittredge was the general manager of Dance Umbrella which, under her leadership, doubled in size, tripled in audience and shrunk in debt.

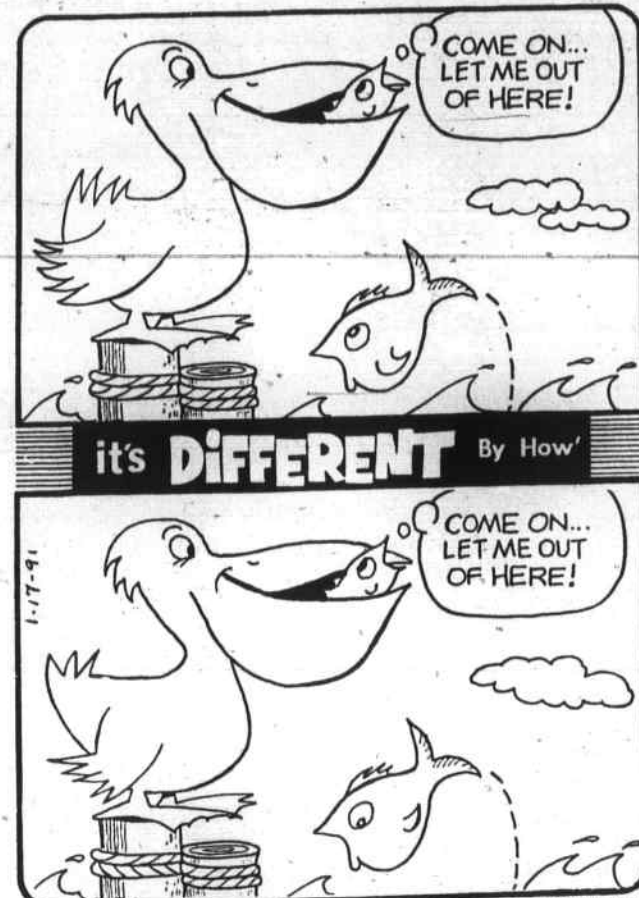

During the past year, the number of cities inspired by Boston's success to celebrate First Night grew from 34 to 60.

BURLINGTON - In a double attempt to save the town money on trash tipping fees and to aid families who need a helping hand, Burlington residents recently used a town recycling day as an occasion to donate to the town's People-Helping-People Program.

When residents brought their recyclables - newspapers, bottles, cans, and plastic jugs - to Burlington High's lower parking lot, they also brought canned and packaged food to help their less fortunate neighbors through the winter.

SENIOR CENTER - Reading seniors have been making themselves extremely useful at Town Hall, stuffing envelopes with property tax bills just as, in the past, they helped with water bills, drug awareness program envelopes and the entire mailing for the town's recycling effort.

Reading Elder Services' dynamo Lee Roberts coordinated the seniors' efforts which, according to Town Treasurer Beth Klepcis, have saved Reading approximately $3,000.

Adopt-A-Dog

FROM S-1

She notes that the older dogs are usually trained and more used to the love and discipline. "The older dogs make great pets because they are past the stage where they eat chairs and cabinet doors."

Davis said "Given half-a-chance we can usually find a home for the animals."

The pair take great care in the animals that are put up for adoption.

Davis said "I would never adopt out a vicious or aggressive dog."

That rule also goes for animals that are seriously sick.

The adoptable animals are not only healthy, they are also spayed and neutered.

"People have to be made aware of how important spaying and neutering are. It makes for a healthier and happier pet," Davis said.

Both Benoit and Davis used the example of parents letting the animals get pregnant so a child can experience the birth of babies.

However, Benoit also said especially in the case of kittens "are you also going to show them being drowned or killed (for the lack of a home)."

Davis admitted that at times animals will be given a stay of execution in hopes of finding a match.

Both officers said that a side benefit of the adoption program is financial savings to the town. Davis explained that, depending on the weight of the animal, euthanasia and disposal costs can go as high as $60. The cost of feeding a dog is minimal.

Davis said that Wilmington residents have donated food, blankets, dog biscuits and raw-hide bones as well as other items for the animals.

According to Benoit, "the program actually generates a little money because the animals have to be licensed before they can be adopted."

The two have many strange stories to tell about the different types of animals that they have been called on to rescue. The range goes from Geese swimming in ponds with plastic six-pack yokes around their necks to chasing cattle.

Davis said that they are not supposed to touch wildlife as most are protected by certain state and/or federal agencies.

However, many times the agencies are just as overworked and underfunded as the officers are. Because of this, the officers are sometimes called on to handle local cases.

The same is true with the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Animals (MSPCA). Davis said that agency's budget has been cut back to the point where they have deleted one ambulance driver. The workload is now falling on the local officers in many towns.

Davis will go out after a raccoon if called. However, she warns that catching a squirrel that has gotten into a house could be dangerous to the house.

She remembers advising one homeowner that she does not chase after squirrels, when the homeowner insisted that she should do so, Davis acceded. The chase through the house caused damage to several knick-knacks along the way but eventually the squirrel was evicted from the premises.

As to the adoption program, Benoit summed it up best when she said, "Any time you can get a dog adopted it is a good story."

Benoit also said, "Once a dog is adopted, the best thing that can happen is that you never hear from the people again."

However, Davis said that the pair usually receives cards and letters from the some of the people that have been happy with their new pets.

FROM S-1

the resolutions we thought you might enjoy reading:

Barbara H., from Wilmington, told us that her resolution wasn't actually a personal resolution. She explained, "It's more of a national resolution. I'd like to see the country resolve its involvement in the Gulf and to have all the men and women serving our country over there home safe and sound."

We agreed with Barbara. We also agreed with Gerry N., from Burlington, who said he had a similar wish for the new year. "I'd like to see the problems with our economy resolved as well," he indicated. "The crisis in the Gulf and the problems with the economy. Those seem to be the two biggest issues bothering Americans these days."

Robert F., from Woburn, told us, "I'd like to see the New England Patriots resolve their problems. It's too late for this year, obviously, but there's always next season, as they say. Maybe with a smart first round draft choice, the Pats will see the beginning of a new era next year."

We were less optimistic about Robert's wish for the new year. Karen G., who lives in Woburn too, had a less critical wish for the new year. "I'd just like to get through the new year without having to listen to another New Kids on the Block video," she said. "I've got three kids under the age of ten, and that's all they play on the VCR. I can't walk in any part of the house without hearing New Kids music."

Karen's friend, Andrea T., from Waltham, also has children under ten, and her resolution for the new year has a similar theme. She told us: "I resolve not to watch another Teenage Ninja Turtle cartoon. My kids make me sit with them every Saturday morning to watch those darn turtles. At first, I didn't mind. In fact, they were kind of cute. But enough is enough!"

Bill A., from Winchester, said: "I resolve never to ride the T again. I was fortunate enough to narrowly miss being involved in both T crashes this year, but on both occasions I was nearly two hours late for work. I'd be better off walking to work every morning!"

Richard K., from Somerville, informed us he'd like to see banks resolve to clean up their financial mess. "It makes me nervous to save money, even though I know my account is insured up to a hundred thousand dollars," he said. "I think people need to have confidence in the banks right now. That might be a first step in helping to get our state economy back on the right track."

Janet R., from Stoneham, told us she'd like to see law enforcement agencies resolve to do a better job of ameliorating crime and drug problems. "I know often times their hands are tied because of the court system," she said, adding, "but that's an area that seems to be worsening. If tax dollars are to be spent on anything, they should be spent on fighting drugs and crime."

Andy R., Janet's husband, interjected that it is the tax crisis in this state that he'd like to see resolved. "I haven't the foggiest notion how it can be done," he admitted, "but there is no doubt in my mind that, in some way, we need to balance our budget, if we ever hope to see daylight at the end of this dark financial tunnel we're all stuck in."

George T., a sixty-three year old fellow from Medford, told us he'd like to see Don Gillis remain as the host of Candlepin Bowling, on Channel five, for another thirty years. "I've been watching that guy for years," he said. "I hope he sticks around for a long time to come. He's an institution around here."

Dick V., from Wilmington, said: "I resolve never to listen to another 'rap' song again. If one comes on my car radio, I'm going to change the channel right away. I can't stand rap music."

Martha V., Dick's wife, told us she'd like to see Gov. Weld resolve to succeed where Mike Dukakis failed, no matter what it takes. "Even though I think it's going to take a miracle," she noted.

Arthur M., from Burlington, informed us that his resolution is to find a new way to make money. "I think I'm going to subscribe to Money magazine this year," he remarked. "That's about the only place I haven't looked lately for ideas."

We hope Arthur finds the secret he's looking for. Jill D., from Lynn, told us she's resolving to make herself a better person. We weren't sure what she meant by that, so we asked her to elucidate. We discovered that she wasn't sure what she meant either. We then asked Jill if she had any idea where she might find the answers to how to make herself a better person. She replied, "One place I won't look to is tv talk shows! They always seem to cloud issues these days, rather than solve them. My resolution is to never pay attention to another so-called 'expert' on a tv talk show!"

Carl F., from Stoneham, told us: "I resolve not to get too excited when the Red Sox head to Winter Haven this February for the start of spring training. Every year I get my hopes up, and it seems every year I get disappointed. This year there won't be any expectations. That way there can't be any more disappointments. Maybe this will be the secret to the Sox doing well."

We told Carl we certainly hoped his formula for success at Fenway Park next summer worked.

So there you have them: A handful of the things on our reader's minds. A few of you asked this columnist if I had any resolutions for the new year. I replied, no, I did not. I decided this year to resolve not to make any resolutions. My philosophy is not unlike Carl F.'s, from Stoneham: If you don't have expectations, you won't have disappointments. As for our reader's new year's resolutions, only time will tell if they come true. Save for a couple of truly significant ones, it's likely that most of them will end up long forgotten by this time next year.

Meanwhile, make it a happy and safe New Year.

Living proof that expert cardiac care touches many hearts.

On May 16, 1987, the Barton family had a heart attack. When Victor Barton felt chest pains that Saturday morning, the only thing his wife Elaine knew for sure was that he needed medical attention fast. The fact that New England Memorial was only a few miles away made their choice an easy one. The care they would receive that night would make their choice the right one.

After Victor was stabilized, our nutritionists, rehabilitation experts and cardiac specialists put together an individually tailored program of preventive cardiac care. We also provide family counseling and training in the provision of home after-care.

On May 16, 1987, the cardiac care team at New England Memorial gave a Stoneham family something more than medical care. They gave them a second chance.

The Bartons are living proof that quality care touches many hearts.

School Notes

by phyllis nissen

Nineteen percent - approximately one in five - of Tewksbury's eighth graders entered the Tewksbury school system after the fourth grade, a much higher number than anticipated, according to information revealed in conjunction with recent Massachusetts Assessment Program tests.

As part of a larger unit on television, the Stoneham Central School students of Mrs. Day and Mrs. Wells recently worked on news broadcasts, analyzing how much TV they watch and graphing the results.

As news teams, they covered the following topics: science and technology, with a report on student-created time machines and snail terrariums; arts and entertainment, with discussions of current art projects and a book review evaluating the year's literary offerings; plus travel and leisure, with a class time-travel series featuring a historical event students would like to have witnessed.

Activities also included investigative reporting and intermittent commercials featuring local inventions and how to purchase them.

The Wakefield Community Education Program recently offered an afternoon literature program from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. at Wakefield Junior High. For $44, students were offered the possibility of exploring works by Tolstoy, Crane, Hemingway, Manchester, and Touchman.

This year, the North Reading School Committee unanimously approved an activity fee for all students in grades seven through 12, with the money going to extra-curricular activities, most of which had been cut from the budget because of the failure to override Prop. 2.5.

School officials justified the fee for all because it was intended to cover the cost of class advisors.

Although, as usual, Reading students were treated to an extra day of Christmas vacation, Reading teachers went back to work on January 2nd for a not-so-usual in-service day - due to budget restraints.

Instead of the townwide theme and gala back-to-school workshop at the high school featured in the recent past, teachers focused, within their individual buildings, on areas such as discipline, school pride, cooperative learning, computer education, the ever-controversial heterogeneous grouping, and various department-related learning.

According to Lynnfield Junior Class President Lauren Maney in the Lynnfield Villager, the Student Advisory Committee feels the $100-per-year high school activity fee is too general in that the football team "uses a lot of money for equipment" while the Student Council "uses money only for an advisor."

According to ex officio student representative to the Lynnfield School Committee Greg Silvano, a member of the state and regional students' advisory council, the newest idea running through the state House of Representatives would allow student representatives to school committees to vote on committee business.

WAKEFIELD CITIZENS' SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION workers (l to r) Joan McRae, Harry Crouse, Jean Leary and Tony Gonnella plan seating arrangement for their 19th Annual Ball to be held at the Seasons' Ballroom at the Colonial Hilton Hotel, Saturday, February 2. Tickets for the popular event are now on sale through this Saturday (January 12) and may be purchased at the CSF office in the Americal Civic Center, Main Street, Wakefield, 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m. through Friday and 10 a.m. to noon, if any left, on Saturday, or by calling (617) 245-4890.

Anti-Diet Weight Loss The New Alternative

SUFFERING IS OPTIONAL.

If you have tried dieting in the past and failed, you are not alone. For many, diet is part of the problem, not its solution. Thin people don't want to eat more than they should. So how come you do? When you learn to think about food the way thin people do, then you will eat casually and controllably, just as they do.

Based on successful work with overeaters in therapy, this unique, ten-week program was developed to help healthy people to finally control their eating without the need for discipline and the constant struggle against temptation.

WHY WAIT?

This small-class experience is not another diet or food supplement program, but a new opportunity for a permanent change in your relationship with food and your body. You can be happy with both, now.

REVIEW: To give you a full description of this effective solution to over-eating, we offer a full, two-hour preview at our offices. Admission is $10. Call early to reserve your place, as seating is extremely limited.

Wincheser Hospital seeks volunteers

The Friends of Winchester Hospital extend an invitation to all men and women of the communities served by the Hospital to attend an orientation meeting for prospective volunteers. On Wednesday, January 16, Glenda Downs and Dot Hoyt, Vice-Chairmen of the Volunteer Services Board, will host a session at 9:30 a.m. in the Board Room of the Hospital to explain the services, the hours, and requirements for becoming a Volunteer.

The introduction will be followed by coffee and a tour of the hospital. Volunteers provide over twenty services within the hospital. There is an area of interest in volunteering for everyone who can invest a few hours weekly or monthly in serving Winchester Hospital. "Come and learn more about these opportunities," said Glenda and Dot.

Learn about old books

Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of the nationally-known Brattle Book Shop in Boston, will speak at 2 p.m. on Friday, January 11, at the AARP meeting at the Melrose Highland Congregational Church, 355 Franklin St., Melrose.

Mr. Gloss' talk is entitled, "Treasures in Your Attic: Old and Rare Books." "New England homes are treasure troves for old and rare books that have increased in value over the years," says Gloss, "and we're inviting those attending to bring any volumes they want to know about to the lecture for a free verbal appraisal."

The Brattle Book Shop is the successor to America's oldest continuously operating antiquarian book store. Kenneth Gloss succeeded his late father, George Gloss, a well-known figure both in Boston and in national antiquarian circles.

Kenneth Gloss had worked in the store since childhood and elected to go into the book business rather than pursue a doctorate in chemistry. He became the sole proprietor upon his father's death several years ago. "I found that books were in my blood and that I would never be really happy if I abandoned the business."

Gloss will bring to the lecture several examples of interesting books, magazines and ephemera from the store's private collection, such as a 1912 World Series scorecard and examples of old LIFE Magazines. (He owns the complete set!)

Following the lecture and question-and-answer session Gloss will give free verbal appraisals of those books and items that people bring with them or will do so at anytime at his 9 West Street emporium in Boston.

For further information, please call the Brattle Book Shop at 1-800-447-9595.

ANTHONY MANCONI

My Uncle Angelo was a deep sea fisherman. Between trips to the Grand Banks he'd go on more than a few benders. My Aunt Nora was against his excessive drinking but he ignored her completely. I remember when he stayed out late one night and came waltzing home singing away at 2 in the morning. Aunt Nora was waiting for him, grabbed his arm and marched him up the hill to the top of the street. Looking down below she shouted, "Do you see that building with the smoke coming out of the chimneys and all the lights blazing? Well, that's a brewery and they can make it faster than you can drink it!" Hardly able to keep one eye open Uncle Angelo exclaimed, "Yeah, but I've got them working nights!"

Before moving to the Middlesex East area most of my family members lived in Charlestown. When a fellow longshoreman died, members of the dock crew decided to pay their respects. The late Uncle John Shea and Rowan Fitzgerald stopped in the Big Potato to buoy up their courage, then proceeded to walk up the stairs of a three-decker. They walked into the parlor of the second floor flat and knelt down at the piano. "Gee," Uncle John said, "I didn't know Timmy had such a beautiful set of teeth." Rowan replied, "Yeah, but there's a bad one here and there." They were promptly shoed out of the wrong floor, climbed to the third and for the next two nights they came early and stayed late. There was plenty of food and drinks in the kitchen.

Rowan put $20 on the table to defray the cost of the funeral and Uncle John made out a check for $100. Rowan said to him, "John, you forgot to sign it." "Keep quiet," Uncle John said, "I make all my contributions anonymously." He then said to the poor widow, "You know, I put my hand on Timmy's forehead and he's still warm." "Hot or cold," she exclaimed, "He goes out at 9 in the morning. By the way," she added, "should I have him buried or cremated?" Uncle John shook her hand and said, "Why don't you have him stuffed and keep the party going!" The next morning a Wells Fargo armored truck, after making a pick-up at a bank, got in at the end of the cortege as it slowly made its way down Bunker Hill Street. My Aunt Nora exclaimed, "Holy Smokes, I guess you CAN take it with you!"

On January 5, past and present members of the 26th "Yankee Division" began a year of commemorative events in honor of the 50th anniversary of the division's activation in World War II. Many present or former members of this proud unit of General Patton's Third Army know that the 26th was among the first to reach Bastogne in the Battle of the Bulge. When the soldiers of the 26th YD returned home in 1946, they were re-activated as a National Guard Division that today crosses five state line with units in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, Rhode Island and (ironically for the "Yankee" Division) South Carolina. But, no matter, we are as Lincoln said, "One Nation under God."

Folks, for many years when someone said something that I adamantly disagreed with, I would practically shout, "baloney!" Well, needless to say, I lost quite a few dear friends that way. Then one day my learned friend George Guyette from Winchester helped me with his philosophy. George taught me to substitute the word amazing for baloney. It has been working like a charm for many years. When Bob Giguere boasted at the VFW Post saying, "In World War II I saved a whole battalion and I refused the Congressional Medal of Honor." I jumped up from my chair and nearly shouted baloney. But at the last second I changed my mind, smiled and said instead, "Bob, everything you just said is amazing!" Try the George Guyette method yourself, folks. It saves wear and tear on the nervous system and, besides, it keeps peace.

The 1934 Citroen was the "first" front wheel drive car in the world. It was known as an engineer's dream and a mechanic's nightmare. What was remarkable about it (especially in this era of auto model changes in mid-year) was that it was made for 20 years without a change in design or engineering. I guess what my grandfather used to say was right - "Don't fix it if it ain't broken!"

The old saying, "Men never make passes at girls who wear glasses," isn't true; especially if they have beautiful frames.

I remember when Rowan Fitzgerald and his pal, Uncle John Shea, stopped in after a hard day's work on the piers and docks to hoist a few. When it was getting late Rowan called his wife Theresa and told her he would be home late. "Where are you," she asked, "I can hear the sound of glasses." "I'm at the optician's having my prescription glasses filled!"

Personality Winners: Andrea Bruno, Henry Scaramo, Greg Beaulieu, Janet Blampye, Bonnie Dinges, all of Lynnfield; Stephen D. A special greeting to Edward and Etta Costello of Medford, Leo F. Beane, Sr. of North Reading, Fr. # What's Doing

—An Arts & Entertainment Update—

MOZART HONORED IN JANUARY CONCERTS

The International Arts Exchange presents the fourth concert of the 1990-91 Old Post Road Historic Concerts featuring 18th- and 19th-century chamber music performed at historically significant sites along the original path of the Old Boston Post Road, the main thoroughfare for travelers, merchants and mail from the colonial era through the mid-19th century. This program honors celebrated composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart with a concert of vocal and instrumental chamber music performed by soprano Suzanne Ehly, violinist Kiploch Earle, Daniel Ryan (OPRHC co-director), and fortepianist Michael Bahmann.

The concerts take place on Thursday, January 10 at 8 p.m. at Old South Meeting House in downtown Boston; and on Friday, January 11 at 8 p.m. at Christ Church on Garden Street in Harvard Square, Cambridge.

Most of the works of this program were composed during the final decade of Mozart's life, years spent in Vienna where Mozart fled to escape the provinciality of the Salzburg court and to distance himself from his father, with whom relations were strained. Throughout this time Mozart was steadily gaining recognition as a composer and piano virtuoso. These years saw an incredible amount of creative activity: Mozart wrote nearly 150 works, maintained a busy performing schedule and taught many students. Yet while he was experiencing fabulous musical success and public acclaim, his health was deteriorating and his financial situation dramatically worsened.

The instrumental works performed in this concert will include the G-major Sonata for violin and piano, K.379, and the C-major Piano Trio, K.548 and Beethoven's variations on a song from Mozart's opera Die Zauberflöte (The Magic Flute). The program will also include Mozart's lieder, which developed in much wider scope than the standard Berlin fare of simple, short melodies set to rudimentary accompaniments.

Admission to the January 10 concert in Boston and the January 11 concert in Cambridge will be $10 ($6 for students and elders). For ticket reservations and further information please call (617) 648-4824.

COMPUTER-GENERATED ART EXHIBIT

An exhibition of 40 computer-generated drawings by artist Chris Wayne will be on display from January 7th through the 30th in the Great Hall of the Boston Public Library in Copley Square. The artist combines photography, painting, drawing, and computer mathematics to create his colorful abstract designs which have been generated from original computer programs.

In explaining how his art evolved, Mr. Wayne said, "I used to wonder how photographers got involved with computers. I didn't know what an electronic tool could add to the great achievements already attained with lens and shutter. It wasn't until I became fascinated with mathematical relationships that the computer's potential in photography was slowly revealed to me." Computer Pictures magazine says Wayne's work "ably demonstrates the computer's capacity to produce painterly forms and use photography to render them in crisp, brilliant colors."

To create his drawings, which have appeared in a number of one-man, group, and juried exhibits, Wayne uses numbers to construct geometric shapes and algebra to reassign their positions, proportions, and contours, causing them to overlap. As images emerge they are rapidly examined and modified until a satisfactory composition is created.

The exhibit is free and open to the public from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday.

"GROUCHO: A LIFE IN REVUE" CONTINUES

Due to the continuing success of "Groucho: A Life in Revue," at the North End's Theatre Lobby, producer Anthony Capodilupo has announced that the internationally acclaimed play with music has been extended through January 27.

Starring Les Marsden in the title role, "Groucho..." opened at Boston's Theatre Lobby September 11 to critical and audience acclaim, and marked its 100th performance December 12, making it the longest running new production this season.

Co-authored by Arthur Marx (Groucho's son) and Robert Fisher, "Groucho..." follows the career of the legendary Marx Brothers from vaudeville to film to television, interweaving trademark songs and comedy routines. Directed by Sam Jerris, the cast includes Melodie Guinta, Jonathan Brody, and Mark S. Cartier. Musical Director is Jonathan Goldberg.

The production continues at Theatre Lobby, 216 Hanover Street, through January 27, with performances as follows: Wednesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 6 and 9 p.m.;

Sunday matinee at 3 p.m.; and Wednesday matinee at 2 p.m. Tickets range from $15 to $24.50, with group rated and dinner/show combination packages available.

For more information on "Groucho..." call or write Theatre Lobby, 216 Hanover St., Boston, MA 02113, (617) 227-9872.

LEXINGTON POPS CHORUS WINTER CONCERT

Beethoven's Mass in C Major, Op. 86; "A Tribute to Cole Porter," "Horray For Hollywood" "With a Voice of Singing" and more. Admission $5; Seniors and Students $3. Tickets are available from members or at the door. For further information call Gail at (617) 729-3971.

Do you like doing crosswords?

The nation's first magazine about crossword puzzles is now available with the premier issue of CROSSWORD Magazine.

Many magazines have featured crossword and cryptic puzzles, but CROSS RD is the first magazine dedicated to the who, what, why and how of filling in those boxes.

The first issue of CROSS RD Magazine includes a behind-the-scenes look at the construction of The New York Times crossword, and a prediction of who will be the next editor of the nation's most popular puzzle.

The second issue will announce the recipients of the first annual Wynner awards, for the year's best puzzles. The Wynner awards are named after Arthur Wynne, who created the first crossword puzzle in 1913 for the old New York World.

"More than 40 million Americans regularly solve crossword puzzles," according to Richard Silvestri, the magazine's crossword editor. "They know who writes their favorite books, and who stars in their favorite movies, yet most people have no idea of the personalities of the 'cruciverbalists' who construct their favorite puzzles."

CROSS RD Magazine is published bimonthly and is available only by mail subscription. For information write CROSS RD Magazine, PO Box 909-W, Bellmore, New York 11710, (516) 679-8608.
